3	5		New	The Design Guide for Roadside Signs sets out guidelines for the design and erection of roadside signs. The guide was last reviewed in 2001 and refers to old superseded standards. The primary revisions include: Use of the current Standard, AS1170.2 2011 Wind Actions terminology, with an appropriate pressure reduction factor used to derive similar support structure sizes to the 2001 design methodology. The reduction factor is subject to a DTMR approved Design Exemption Use of terminology to conform to structural grade steel (OD rather than NB, which is used for water pressure pipes) Removal of Trusses as a support option Updated wind chart diagrams that include provision for one post Inclusion of guidance for sight board installations to reduce the risk of sign spearing. Reference to recently developed Standard Drawing 1452 for sight board installation and sign connection design.
	6		New	The State Strategic Touring Routes Sign Revitalisation guideline is a new document that sets out the design of roadside signs developed under the State Strategic Touring Routes (SSTR) sign revitalisation project. The guideline has three key focus areas including: signs to natural attractions, signs which identify the SSTR, welcome signs, and some minor focus areas including: signs to accredited visitor information centre, existing tourist signs with stylised logos.
