Ollera Creek Bridge Update – 10 February 2025

Ollera Creek Bridge is set to open at around 8pm tonight, for freight, supply and emergency vehicles travelling north to Cairns.

Priority works to deliver an interim repair solution for Ollera Creek Bridge will be finished tonight, and while future additional work will be required, the opening of the Ollera Creek Bridge has been fast-tracked to facilitate freight movement, prior to expected further flooding impacts north of Ingham in coming days.

Freight, supply and emergency vehicles travelling north from Ingham to Cairns may consider using the window from around 8pm until the Seymour Bridge closes for essential travel.

Freight, supply and emergency vehicles travelling north will be prioritised because the Bruce Highway at the Seymour River (between Cardwell and Ingham) is forecast to close in the early hours of tomorrow morning (Tuesday) due to flooding; however, this is subject to change.

The priority movement of freight, supply and emergency vehicles will be coordinated by Queensland Police.

Tomorrow afternoon (Tuesday) the Ollera Creek Bridge will also open to general traffic. Traffic control and speed reductions will remain in place at the Ollera Creek Bridge for the foreseeable future.
